

Sealed bids will be accepted Monday, June 9, for the old FARMERS STATE BANK BUILDING on the west side of the Georgetown Square. The building is presently owned by Williamson County.

County to accept bids on old bank building

Sealed bids for the purchase of the old Farmer's State Bank building will be opened at 10:30 a.m. Monday, June 9, by County Judge C. L. Chance in the presence of county commissioners.

The 28x108 foot building, purchased by the county in 1967 for $6500, and referred to as the annex, was used for office space.

In February the office of the county school superintendent, who last occupied the building, moved to the third floor of the courthouse. The east wing of the third floor was vacated when the local offices of the Department of Public Welfare moved to the new Williamson County Office building on Third Street.

In January offices of the Community Action Agency moved from the building to another location on the square.

Although County Clerk Dick Cervenka said his office will need additional space within the next nine months, Chance said he doubts the old bank building would be suitable for expanding county operations into.

Chance said, "That facade on the front, as nice as it is, is nothing but a nasty pigeon roost."

"That old building is practically impossible to air condition, and the ceiling is 25 feet high," he said, adding that two old concrete vaults with steel doors are lodged permanently in the structure.

Utility bills for the annex totaled $1881 for calendar year 1974. On the other hand, utilities for the modern office building with central heating and air conditioning were more than $2000, although the new building was occupied only for the last four months of the year.

For the first four months of this year, utilities have averaged $240 per month.

In a staff meeting of elected county officials on May 7, Commissioner R. A. Rozacky said, "The ASCS (Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation) office is planning to move. We anticipate more space to be available." ASCS offices are located in the basement of the courthouse.

Commissioner Wesley Foust who made the formal motion that the county sell the building said, "I don't think we are really hurting for space. We can always do some department shifting here and there, using other than county offices."

Other officials who expressed a need for more space at the staff meeting were District Attorney William Connor and Tax Assessor-Collector William Buck.

Judge Vance much better

Calling District Judge Kirby Vance, the SUN reporter asked for good news, like "how are you getting along and when will you be back."

"I'm READY to come back now, but I'll go back to Scott and White Hospital in Temple Monday and they will tell me whether I'm ABLE to come back," he replied.

He said he is getting stronger every day and feels lucky to be here at all after his automobile accident on March 3. His major injury was his broken leg, just below the knee — so close to the knee that a cast would have left a stiff leg, so the solution was to stay off the leg until it is healed.

Week's news in a nutshell

WILLIAMSON COUNTY COMMISSIONERS took no action on a request by Sheriff August Bosshard to purchase liability insurance to protect deputies from lawsuits. Bosshard said the fear of a lawsuit — and the resulting damage to family finances — adversely affects law enforcement in the county. Commissioner Wesley Foust replied that officers doing their jobs right will not attract any lawsuits.

JUNE FIRST is the new deadline for farmers in northern Williamson County to plant cotton, Agriculture Commissioner John C. White, announced. Noting that recent hail storms had severely damaged crops between Jarrell and Schwertner, White postponed the original May 20 deadline.

S.S. MAYAGUEZ was seized by the new recently-formed government of Cambodia, beginning a 3-day confrontation with the U. S. government. After diplomatic attempts to regain the ship and its 39 crewmen failed, President Ford ordered 200 Marines to land on the island of Koh Tang, take the ship and return the men. Despite several casualties, the military offensive succeeded.

In Georgetown area

Building up

From listening to builders and other people visiting around city hall, City Mgr. Leo Wood came to this conclusion Thursday afternoon, "The way it looks right now, the Georgetown area may be on the verge of taking off in the next year. The growth looks real good."

Pressed on the point, Wood said he has no concrete evidence, although a builder from Austin told him the other day that Georgetown "looks like the hottest potential growth area in the state." Wood suggested talking with builders around town about their business.

Jim Caskey is the builder that people agree has thrived most in the past few months.

"My business started surging in August of last year and it's been real good ever since," Caskey said. "For the first four months of this year, my sales have been as high as they've ever been."

In the construction business for five years, Caskey said about half his work is done in Austin, "but Georgetown's been real steady. Everything I build these days, I sell."

He said he currently is working on eight homes in the Serenada Country Estates, a development of homes in the $35,000 and up range. Usually, his workload is half that, he said.

As to the reason for the sudden prosperity, Caskey points to lower interest rates.

"Interest rates came down a bit, and people are just more willing to make a major purchase these days," he said.

"About half the people buying homes in this area are people who are moving here from somewhere else," he said. "The other half is people who live here already and either want a larger place or don't want to rent anymore."

Working with Caskey at Serenada is builder Bobby Stanton.

"Business has really picked up in the last 60 days. It's been great out at Serenada," he said.

"There seems to be a lot more interest and activity than in the last quarter of last year," he said. "Right now, I'm very optimistic about the future."

Gloria Duffy in the city Building Department confirmed that the past two months have been booming for local house construction.

She said that plumbing and electrical permits in May have totalled four already. In April there were nine.

"Before April, there wasn't much activity since last October," she said. "The last two months have shown a substantial increase."

Builder Harold Parker said he's definitely seen an increase in inquiries about new homes in the last 30-45 days.

"I've sold more in the last month or so than in the last half of last year," he said.

He credits the slowly-improving national economy with the current health of the Georgetown construction industry.

"The economy is the question about the future," Parker said, "and it sure looks a lot better than six months ago. Things here look pretty good, but it's still not as good as 1973. I wish it was."

City tax assessor-collector Robert Caluette said three persons have visited his office in the past week checking on Georgetown's tax base, "and that's usually a pretty good sign they've about to build something here."

"I don't know exactly what's happening," he said, "but there's bound to be something good going on."

Sheriff files deposition

Sealed depositions of defendants in the Fielder vs. four members of the Williamson County Sheriff's department have been filed in the U. S. District Court in Austin.

Sheriff August Bosshard and three members of his department were named defendants in a damage suit filed in October 1974, by Lonnie Elbert Fielder and Edna Lois Fielder.

The suit contends that the death of their son Jimmie Fielder was in part caused by the defendants' alleged failure to provide Jimmie Fielder with needed medical care.

Jimmie Fielder died in a county jail cell July 5, 1974.

Defendants in the case are Bosshard, county jailer Robert N. Champion, and sheriff's deputies Daniel J. Walker and Robert Chandler, represented by an Austin attorney Clint Small, Jr.

Waggoner Carr, attorney for the Fielders, was appointed May 7 as attorney ad litem to also represent the children and ex-wife of the deceased.

Carr said that evidence is still being gathered in the case. He did not know when the case will come to trial.

Jimmie Fielder's death was diagnosed on autopsy as caused by "massive bleeding from an ulcerated blood vessel in the stomach."

A Williamson County grand jury convened seven days after the death and concurred with Georgetown Justice of the Peace Bill Hill that Fielder died from natural causes.

The Fielders contend in the suit, that the sheriff's department was notified that their son was in need of medical attention.

Bosshard said Jimmie Fielder at no time told the sheriff, the deputies or the jailers that he was ill.

The Fielders are seeking a jury trial in the case.

Pickle tickled at S.U. recognition

Cong. J. J. (Jake) Pickle is "very pleased" about two Southwestern University buildings being recently placed on the National Register of Historic Places.

"This historic property is now listed in accord with the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966," Pickle stated, "and I am very pleased that this action has occurred."

The Administration Building and Mood Hall are now eligible for federal funds to renovate, preserve, and protect them.

"The rich history and tradition associated with Southwestern University is most deserving of this recognition," Rep. Pickle said.

The Williamson County Historical Survey Committee's chairman, Mrs. Clara Scarbrough, said, "We certainly appreciate the congressman's efforts urging and supporting recognition for these fine old buildings."

Blackout could disable police

If a tornado struck Georgetown and knocked out the power downtown, the police and sheriff's departments would be unable to communicate over their car radios.

Police Chief Travis Thomas discovered the possibility last week when a half-hour blackout in the city hall building left him wandering around the office with a flashlight, wondering what was going on around town. If there had been a natural disaster, he would have been desperate.

To avoid the problem, Thomas plans to apply for federal grant money for a backup generator through the Capital Area Planning Council (CAPCO) office in Austin.

"It could be a real problem if we couldn't get in touch with our patrol cars or they couldn't call us for help," Thomas said.

The recently-hired chief said he expects the CAPCO application process to last until 1976 because the planning agency traditionally takes a long time to complete such applications.

Sheriff August Bosshard said he isn't concerned about the possibility of a power blackout, even during an emergency. He said the courthouse has an old gas generator for use as a backup "but it hasn't been used in so long, I don't know if it would work if we tried it."

"If we lost our power, we'd just send all our cars out in the county without any communication," he said. "There's always word of mouth, you know."

Bosshard said he thinks it would be "reasonable" for the proposed county-wide dispatching system to have a backup generator, "but that's up to the commissioners to decide."

If we ran a guessing contest on Who's the Least Likely to Retire, I'd bet that A. F. "Arm-py" Davis would come close to winning. He should be good for another 25 years before stepping out and learning how to fish. Now his routine activities include an excellent game of tennis and running 5 miles every day, combined with a vigorous day's work.

ALL OF THE ABOVE is to dispel any doubt about his immediate retirement which might have been planted by a story in the SUN on May 1. A new reporter called him the "retired owner" of the local funeral home and our old proof-readers failed to catch and correct it. "Arm-py" told me he had endured some kidding on the matter and I am happy to lay the idea to rest, at least for the next quarter century.

Practically all Americans, I would say, except the loved ones of those two U. S. Marines who were killed and the others who are missing or were wounded, are pleased that our president use a show of force to free our sailors from the silly Cambodians. We may have lost a couple of skirmishes recently but we're nobody's push-over.

OUR CONGRATULATIONS to our Eagles and Pirates on their fine baseball season. The Pirates, who had won the Lone Star Conference two years running, were nipped for the title by the Seguin Lutherans, while the Eagles ran aground at the hands of their old nemesis, Taylor. The Blue and White, however, had a fine season, winning the tough north zone which includes such stalwarts as Cameron, Belton, Copperas Cove, Lampasas, and Gatesville. Wait 'til next year!

"Second place isn't bad," I told Pirate Coach Jim Mallon last week. "It's not as good as first," he retorted quickly, almost fiercely, and I am sure I would have gotten the same sort of response from Eagle mentor Steve Turner. Both are highly competitive. Both want to be number 1. They prepare and expect their teams to win.

I'M GLAD PRESIDENT FORD cranked up his political nerve and refused to give the $1.5 billion to near-bankrupt New York, which has been living beyond its means for the past couple of decades. In the first place, the U. S. treasury is also broke. The difference lies in the treasury's ability to print money, a habit that is making your money and mine more useless every day. New York, like all of the U. S. cities, is already getting a tremendous bonanza in revenue sharing, but there's no end to appetites. It will be interesting to keep an eye on Gotham, which will be impossible not to do, and in the next 12 months see how it and many other cities across the nation are going to handle their fiscal difficulties.

NEW MALPRACTICE LEGISLATION

Our state legislature is working on a bill to give the medical profession relief from ruinous malpractice suits now sweeping the country.

IT IS HIGH TIME. Unreasonably huge sums are being awarded, especially in California and New York. Awards are so large, in fact, that malpractice insurance is difficult to buy at any price, so that many fine doctors are simply closing shop and quitting practice.

In Georgetown our doctors, along with their excellent little hospital, pay nearly $50 thousand a year for this insurance! To pay the premiums they must do as all doctors do, increase their medical fees. So, very quickly we see that the patients pick up the tabs.

OUR STATE LEGISLATORS are presumably making an effort to come up with a fair bill to protect the patient and the doctor. There is great and increasing need for a proper regulation and we hope such will be quickly forthcoming.

Editor's note: Insurance Board Chairman Joe Christie said Wednesday the bill discussed above is "worse than no bill at all, offering physicians and hospitals no relief at all." The new bill would not allow the State Insurance Board to stop excessive rates because companies would not even be required to file rates with the Board.

About the only value in the bill, Christie indicated, is the $100 thousand cap it puts on damages from a doctor or health unit.

Sometimes it is hard not to be disillusioned, or at least disgusted.

HAVEN FOR THE REFUGEES

We think it's great that our country is offering a haven to more than a hundred thousand Vietnam refugees.

THIS IS A HISTORIC ROLE this nation has played for more than two centuries and is largely responsible for the great diversity of talents, customs and vitality of our society.

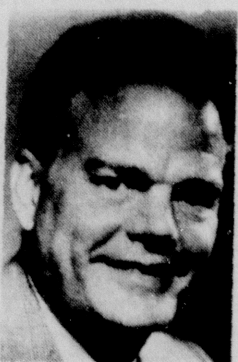

We can easily absorb this new handful of tormented people who cast their lot with us, rather than risking their lives at the hands of the conquering communists. There will be vexations, of course, some already developing. A few jobs will go to these people that some will feel should have gone to our own jobless citizens. It is not a good moment for refugees to painfully blend into the American melting pot.

But, we will make the best of it. Some of the refugees have had a change of heart and would like to return to their homeland. We think arrangements to accommodate these people should be given priority. Certainly we do not wish to have anyone here against his will. At the same time we should feel no bitterness against those who change their minds. They have been through an inconceivably traumatic experience that is not yet ended.

WE ARE VERY PROUD of our First Baptist Church brethren for opening their hearts and voting unanimously to adopt a refugee family. "Preferably a Baptist family, yes, but if one isn't available the church will open its doors to any refugee family regardless of faith," the Rev. Al Cummins points out.

Certainly we live in mystifying times. There's always another corner just ahead and no one can guess what lies beyond it. There's no such thing as smooth sailing any longer. Life is real, earnest and full of challenge.

In just a few months we will be celebrating the 200th anniversary of our great nation. It's better now than it has ever been, a thought we might ponder in the months to come.

Unemployment pays so well these days that countless Americans are refusing jobs, choosing to loaf. These are the new "idle rich."

TEA visit didn't come in Jarrell

An expected visit from a Texas Education Agency accreditation team never came last week. Jarrell Schools Supt. A. L. Lytle reported late Friday.

Lytle said he waited all day Thursday and Friday for an accreditation team which was scheduled to rate the school district's improvements in the past year.

Following visits in 1973 and 1974, TEA warned the district that "serious violations" of the agency's educational standards existed.

Lytle said he had a presentation prepared for TEA, but he's mainly waiting to hear what the agency says needs to be done to replace Jarrell's 59-year-old high school.

The district's voters rejected a $650,000 bond issue in March, although TEA's principal demand on the district has been for a new school building.

"I'm going to tell TEA that whatever they say we need to do to meet their standards, then we'll do it," Lytle said.

He said that in the past week several Jarrell area residents have come in to his office and expressed total support.

"They've told me that regardless what it takes, they'll do it," he said. "Of course, if we have another bond election, and the people aren't willing to support it, then we'll just have to let things go."

Lytle said his experience with schools accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools has convinced him that Jarrell meets that association's standards for curriculum.

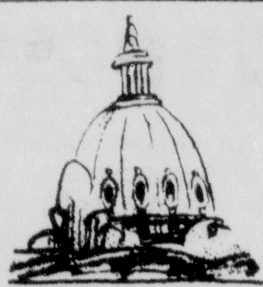

"I know for a fact that we meet Southern Association standards," he said. "If they have any complaints, it's going to be in regard to the building issue."

The superintendent said he had heard the accreditation division of TEA was forced to call an emergency meeting in Belton Thursday, so he suspected that the Belton meeting caused the delay in Jarrell.

Ford Has Steering Problems

WASHINGTON — President Gerald Ford is losing control of the federal bureaucracy.

Policy decisions made in the Oval Office are being circumvented, ignored and sometimes reversed at virtually every level of the Balkanized bureaucracy.

Ford recently decided, for example, not to re-establish the Special Drug Abuse Office in the White House. But a number of senior drug officials started their own quiet lobbying effort on Capitol Hill. Now legislation to perpetuate their jobs has been introduced in both the Senate and the House.

In another case, a high-level decision was made not to bring criminal charges against Ven-Fuel, a firm suspected of using fraudulent figures to overcharge Florida utility customers. The decision was made ostensibly to avoid antagonizing the Venezuelan government, which owns part of Ven-Fuel. But lower-echelon officials in the Justice Department and Customs Bureau decided to prosecute the case anyway.

Ford, of course, is not the first President to be frustrated by the paper shufflers. John F. Kennedy likened his bureaucratic encounters to wrestling with a whale — he could never seem to get a firm hold on the blubber.

But as the nation's first non-elected President, Ford has unique problems. His orders are not backed up by the demonstrated force of the electorate.

Therefore, the swivel-chair legions often do not feel compelled to carry them out. In addition, Ford's lack of dynamism and his personal belief in a strong Congress have undercut him with the bureaucrats. The President has asserted himself, however, in the field of foreign policy. He recently took control of the Middle East negotiations. Hereafter, Ford, not Henry Kissinger, will call the shots.

He has started by scheduling a tour of the Middle East in June. But even here, Ford seems to have credibility problems. Several Arab leaders have told us that they regard Ford as a weak President.

Ford will try to use his Middle East trip to convince them, and the Washington bureaucracy, otherwise.

Bogus Bloodbath: The latest secret intelligence reports dispute the "bloodbath" stories that former American Ambassador Graham Martin cabled from Saigon. Before his evacuation, Martin reported to the State Department that the Communists were killing anti-Communists in Da Nang, Hue and other captured cities.

But more authentic information is now available from eye witnesses who left Da Nang and Hue after the Communist takeover. They were unaware, they said, of any bloodbath. They reported, on the contrary, that officials of the former regime had been taken to a camp outside Da Nang for re-education.

The intelligence reports from Cambodia, however, tell another story. The Communists have emptied the cities and sent the populations into the countryside, supposedly to till the soil. But the mass exodus was unplanned. There has been insufficient food and water to take care of the transplanted population.

The intelligence reports describe terrible suffering and warn that the forced move may result in mass deaths.

Tailored Ethics: The House of Representatives quietly adopted a rule last month that would allow a convicted congressman to continue to help write the nation's laws. He would be permitted to vote on the House floor provided that his jail sentence was not more than two years.

The rule seems to be tailored for Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, who pleaded guilty to two violations of the election laws. Hansen could have been sentenced to no more than two years.

Meanwhile, many other congressmen almost violated the law by missing the April 30 filing deadline for personal financial reports. Just two days before the deadline, for example, none of the House leaders had filed. And on the morning of the deadline, 90 reports were still missing. But a frantic day of calling and cajoling by the House Ethics Committee got all the reports in by late evening.

Our own investigation into congressional financing uncovered the fact that at least 61 members collect special slush funds to help run their offices. The funds are secret and can be collected from corporations, which are off-limits for regular campaign funds.

Meanwhile, the Ethics Committee pretends it has nothing to investigate.

Cause Celebre: Some famous figures suddenly have become involved in a battle over an obscure politician.

Former ITT lobbyist Dita Beard and movie star Robert Redford are embroiled on opposite sides in the fight over Stanley Hathaway's nomination to be the new Interior Secretary. Hathaway is the former governor of Wyoming.

It turns out that Beard, who was the central figure in the infamous ITT-Nixon scandals, stayed with Hathaway's family in Wyoming just a few months after we broke the ITT story. It is no more than an embarrassing tie, but Hathaway is already suspect for being too close to the special interests.

Redford, meanwhile, was making the rounds on Capitol Hill urging the rejection of Hathaway on environmental grounds. Senators were surprised by his detailed knowledge of the issues.

"Unfortunately," one Senate aide cracked, "he seems to know more about Interior than Hathaway does."

AUSTIN — Finally, farmers and ranchers are on the way to getting relief from skyrocketing property taxes.

Under legislation approved by the House and now ready for Senate consideration, farm and ranch taxes will be set on the basis of agricultural value instead of what the land could bring on the real estate market.

The growing popularity of buying rural land as a speculative investment has driven land prices far higher than their productive values, making it virtually impossible for many farmers and ranchers to pay the resulting increase in taxes and make enough profit to stay in business.

Until this drastic rise in rural property taxes is corrected, we will continue to see farmers and ranchers forced to sell out. Every time a farm or ranch goes under, there are fewer crops and less meat in the grocery store, and food prices go up. So for consumers as well as farmers and ranchers, it is important for the rural land tax bill to become law.

There are only three weeks left in this legislative session, so quick action will be needed to get this bill through the Senate. I strongly support it and will be working for its success.

SCHOOL FINANCE MOVES FORWARD: About the time this report appears in the press, the House will begin floor action on school finance reform.

The Public Education Committee proposal, which I authored, will be the main bill before the House, though it will probably be amended to a considerable degree.

I expect the final bill to pass the House to cause no new taxes, either at the local or state level. It will raise operating funds for schools by $20 per pupil next year and $40 per pupil the following year, and transportation funds will increase by 75 percent. An equalization funding mechanism will begin pumping extra dollars into poorer school districts in order to equalize education across the state. Teachers will get a substantial raise, probably in the neighborhood of $1400 per year.

The final bill will not use the "weighted-pupil" approach and will provide around 80 percent funding from the state level. I am generally pleased with the prospects for the final education bill considering the limited funds available. Chances are excellent that the final bill will include the reforms so desperately needed in our school system. Local property tax increases must be stopped.

OTHER ACTION: As the legislature nears its June 2 deadline, the House is accelerating its legislative action. Last week several significant bills gained House approval.

A state health planning act passed the House, enlarging the duties of the state Department of Health and renaming it as the Department of Health Resources.

This bill makes changes necessary for Texas to receive around $350 million a year in federal health money. It is especially important to our own area where at least three child care or health facilities rely on this federal funding.

The House also passed a bill limiting the amount of money which can be spent on statewide political campaigns to around $850,000 for statewide races. The bill, which is similar to federal laws limiting election spending, is a first step in reducing the often-outlandish amounts spent on campaigns.

Finally, a bill creating a state personnel board was approved and sent to the Senate. Every state agency now takes care of its own personnel policies, and the new board should make the state employment more efficient and hopefully more inexpensive.

Ruth Morgan Ferguson gets AAUW 50-year award

Mrs. Ruth Morgan Ferguson, Dean of Women, Emeritus and former professor of English at Southwestern University, is the recipient of a 50-year membership award from the national office of American Association of University Women, Washington, D.C.

In announcing the award, Ruth B. Barnes, assistant director of AAUW, said: "The gold card signifying 50-year life membership and signed by the national president, M. Anne Campbell, is an expression of American Association of University Women's appreciation for the half-century of loyalty and service to the association on all levels — local, state and national."

Presenting the award on behalf of the national association on Thursday, May 15, at the Wesleyan Home in Georgetown was Mrs. C. H. Stevenson, president of the Georgetown branch of AAUW. Also attending the presentation was Mrs. Leonard Ferguson of Georgetown, daughter-in-law of Dean Ferguson.

Mrs. Ferguson, who retired after 40 years of teaching English at Southwestern University, also served as Dean of Women for two of those four decades in addition to her teaching. A graduate of Southwestern University with the Bachelor of Arts and Master of Arts degrees, Mrs. Ferguson has had graduate study at the University of Chicago and Columbia University. She is listed in Leaders in Education, Who's Who in the South and Southwest, Directory of American Scholars, Who's Who in Methodism, Business and Professional Directory of Central Texas, Texas Women of Distinction, The Hereditary Register of the United States. She has travelled extensively in Europe, Mexico and throughout the United States.

Memberships for Mrs. Ferguson include National Council of Teachers of English, Conference of College English Teachers of Texas, National Association of Deans of Women and Counselors, Texas Association of Deans of Women, American Association of University Women, American Association of University Professors, Alpha Chi, Sigma Tau Delta, Delta Kappa Gamma, Pi Delta Epsilon, Kappa Phi, Daughters of the American Revolution, Order of the Eastern Star, Central Texas Area Museum, Women's Study Club, Methodist Church, United States Daughters of 1812, General Daniel Morgan Society of Children of American Revolution, and other organizations.

Many honors have come to Mrs. Ferguson. She is the recipient of the Distinguished Alumna Award from Southwestern University, and honored on Deans' Day during homecoming festivities at the university. Three university yearbooks, THE SOUTHWESTERN, have been dedicated to her. A portrait of Dean Ferguson, commissioned by Southwestern University and painted by Allison Joy, artist of Houston, hangs in the Faculty Lounge in the Bishops Union Building at the university.

This AAUW recognition for 50 years of service to the organization is but one of a long list of honors bestowed upon this outstanding educator.

WILLIAMS-NEWMAN
Mrs. Rhonda Williams and Don Newman were married Saturday afternoon at the First United Methodist Church with Rev. Bernard Stein officiating. Attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Joe Buchanan.

Kent Burress played the traditional wedding music.

A reception was held at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Walker after the ceremony. They are now at home in Round Rock. He has employment in Austin.

—O—
Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Knauth and Mrs. James Brookings have been in Georgetown a number of times to visit Edward Knauth at the hospital.

and Thomas Grohman. Jerry Graham, school business manager, reviewed the history of the awards, dating back several years when Jack Frost, then new superintendent, and Rotarian Sam Brady approached the club about recognizing outstanding students and rewarding their achievements with jackets. Mrs. Raye McCoy introduced the students to club members.

Harness The Wind: Burnet Man Knows How

WIND - It streams in silent rivers across the sky, surges in invisible cataracts over mountain ridges, boils heavenward over hot deserts and humid rain forests, swirls in furious, catastrophic maelstroms over Kansas, and the Caribbean and the China Seas. It is power of cosmic magnitude. Scientists have estimated if all the earth's atmosphere were moving at a leisurely 20 miles per hour - the speed of a light breeze - its energy at any one moment would equal that generated by the Hoover Dam operating at full capacity, night and day, for 6,680 years.

Life Science Library
-The Weather

This article taken from a recently published Marble Falls Highlander -

BURNET - The windmill is a simple device and has been used for hundreds of years to do small, odd jobs for man. In Texas, where it seems the wind never stops blowing, windmills are common and taken for granted. They are used to pump water out of the ground, that's all. Or is it?

Hugh McCoy of Burnet says that's not all. He believes windmills can be used to supply electrical power for entire cities. Is this McCoy a crackpot or a mad scientist? No, just a print shop owner who has been interested in electrical power generation for some 17 years. But he has designed a relatively simple "wind-energy, compressed air, electrical generating system" which several university engineers and experts from the National Science Foundation (NSF) seem to think would work.

McCoy's system would use one or a group of large windmills to power an air compressor to fill a huge underground storage tank with air. The highly compressed air would then be used to drive a turbine generator to produce electricity.

He began working on the system early in the summer of 1973 and by summer's end completed work on the initial design.

Before then, he had been toying for 15 years or so with the idea of using solar energy to heat compressed air in a chamber. As the air expanded under the heat, it would be used to turn the turbine generating plant.

"I just couldn't give up the idea of using compressed air, but I couldn't figure out how to compress the air in the first place without using electricity," McCoy says.

What he wanted was to devise a system which would produce energy without using it.

The solar idea just never worked out, he says. The idea of using wind to power the compressor came to him one day when he was fooling with an electric motor. On the motor's drive shaft, he had put a small propeller. He hooked the small generator to a flashlight bulb and, using compressed air to spin the propeller, he powered the generator, lighting the bulb.

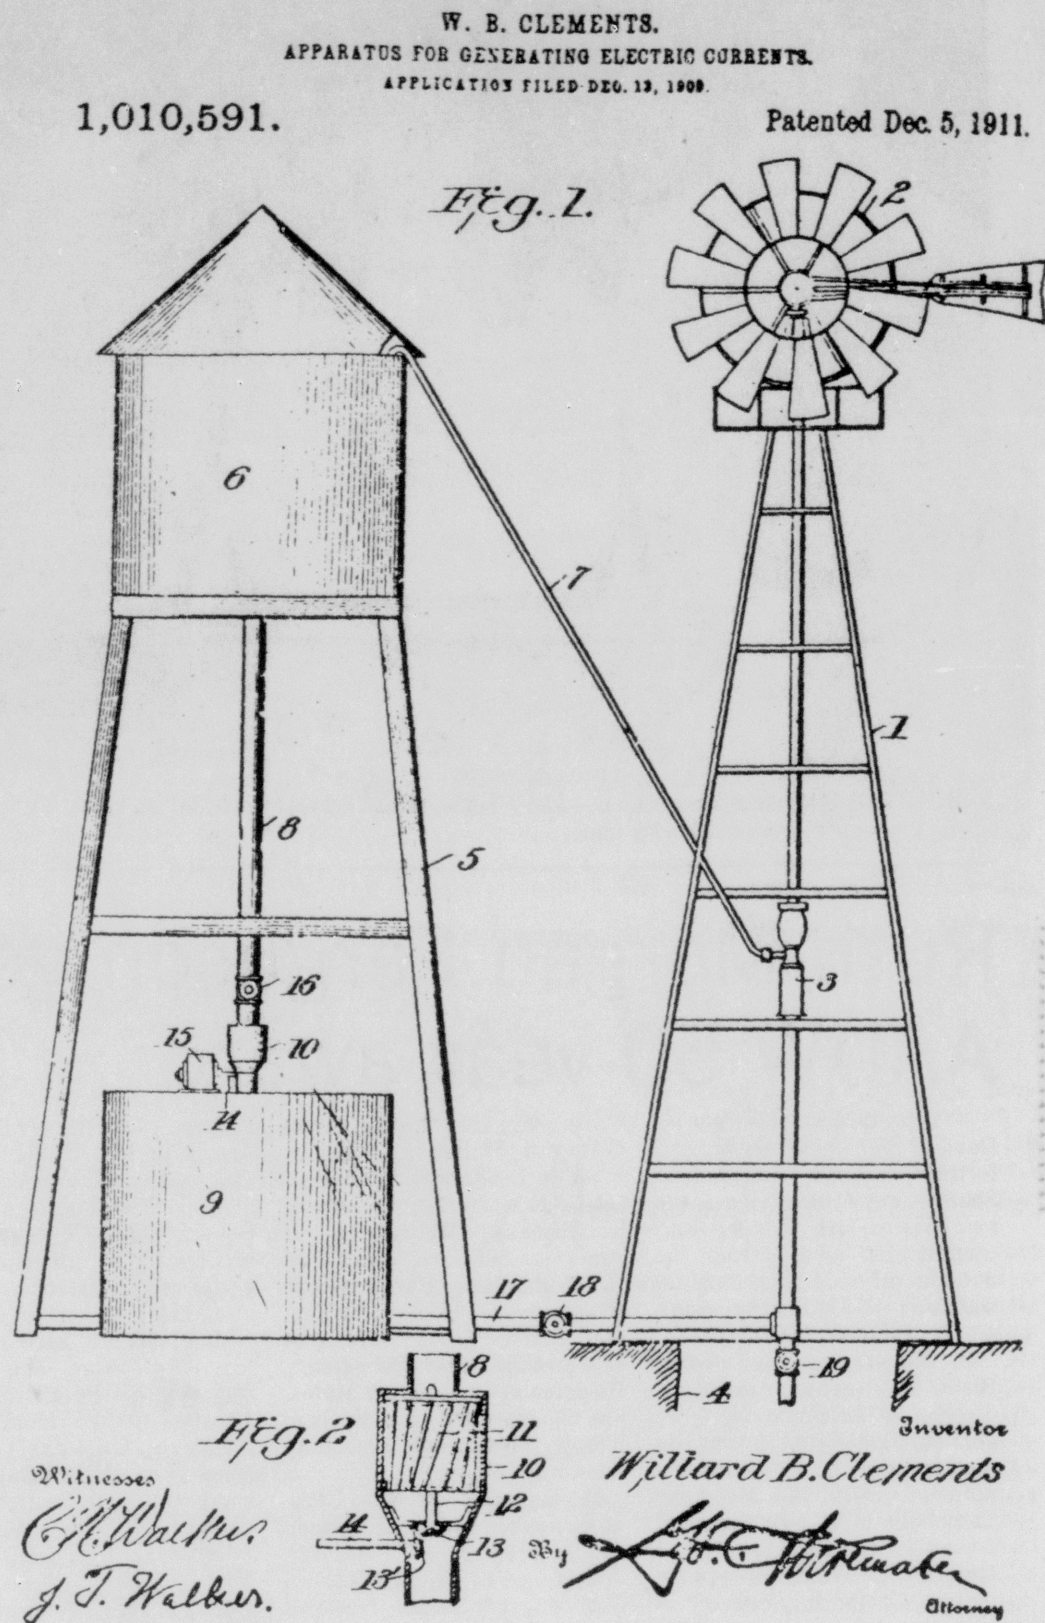

"It suddenly occurred to me, why not use the wind to compress the air. It could produce power without fuel for the compressor and without any pollution," McCoy says.

After studying the various aspects of such a system: compressors, valves, regulators, turbines and generators, McCoy sat down and drew up a design.

He hired a lawyer to see if he could get a patent on the system, only to learn that numerous similar devices had been invented and patented - the first as early as 1911.

Patent protection for his system will only be available if some specific designs and "inventive concepts necessary for the operation of the system can be developed," McCoy's attorney advised.

The models which prevented him from getting a patent were designed for a much smaller operation and were mostly im-

THE FIRST WIND-POWERED, ELECTRICAL GENERATION SYSTEM ON RECORD at the U.S. patent office. It would have supplied the power to light four 100-watt lightbulbs. This system, along with several other wind power systems already patented, prevented Hugh McCoy of Burnet from receiving a patent on his system.

Summer applicants need S. S. number

Students and other people planning to get summer jobs should apply without delay for a social security number if they don't already have one, according to Ed Bowers, Social Security District Manager in Austin.

Some employers won't hire you unless you have a social security number. Delaying your application might prevent you from being hired or cause you to lose time and money.

You should apply for your social security number several weeks before you need it for a job. If you don't recall having had a social security number before, your application is screened against central files in Baltimore to make sure a second number isn't issued to you. Screening takes time.

Your social security number is yours alone and remains the same for life. People applying for a social security number for the first time may be asked to prove their age, identity and citizenship.

The social security office is at 2301 S. Congress.

practical, McCoy says. At first, he says he was "fuming" about it, then he was just sad.

McCoy says it is like a man getting a patent for the design of a small, model airplane, a toy. Then later someone else designs a large, functional airplane to carry people and cargo, using some of the same elements.

"He can't get a patent because of that silly model," McCoy says.

He let the idea sit for awhile, knowing there would be no protection or financial gain in it for him, he says.

Last year he submitted the idea, design, drawings and results of the patent search to the NSF. For months he heard nothing and had about given up when, in January, he received a letter from the foundation.

"Your concept is theoretically feasible and technically practical; it is not original, however, in that essentially similar concepts have been considered in the past by others," the letter read.

It went on to say the primary problem now is that it is "economically impractical", but added "it appears as if this and other concepts may approach economic viability in the future."

McCoy has since been invited to the "Wind Energy Conversion Systems Workshop Conference" this June in Washington, D.C. The workshop is sponsored by the Energy Research and Development Administration's division of Solar Research and by the NSF.

In the June, 1973 report of workshop proceedings put out by NSF and NASA, McCoy points to one paragraph he finds interesting which estimates the amount of power that could be produced in various parts of the U.S. by wind generation.

"Some numbers are quite impressive: more than 300 billion kilowatt hours (KWH) a year off the shore of New England, 180 billion off the mid-Atlantic Seaboard, 201 billion in the Great Plains, 190 billion off the Texas Gulf Coast and perhaps 400 billion along the Aleutian Chain," it reads.

McCoy says he would like to attend the conference but will be unable to do so unless he can raise the money for the trip.

Texas A&M University, with a little prodding from State Representative Camm Lary, Jr. of Burnet, agreed to do a feasibility study of McCoy's system.

The study was conducted by a group of professors in the mechanical engineering department and their findings were similar to those of the NSF. The concept is feasible, but the economic aspects are "at best uncertain," they said.

The way things are going, McCoy believes, the system would be feasible by 1980.

The only cost of the system would be the initial investment and maintenance operations. Compared to fossil fuel and nuclear plants, the advantages of wind power are numerous. Eliminated would be the cost of fuel - coal, oil or nuclear, boilers, condensers, a cooling lake, fire box and fuel storage tanks.

Wind power systems which use the windmill to generate electricity directly, and then store the power in batteries are now on the market. McCoy says his system using air storage is far superior, citing a report in power engineering sent him by the city of Austin. The report states:

"The cost of this (air) reservoir represents a storage investment of about 90 cents per kilowatt hour (KWH). On the same basis, storage batteries provide storage at a cost of approximately $59 per KWH."

McCoy is trying to find a research group interested in the development of the system and, he says, he would be willing to work with any interested group on the project.

He says he has all but given up the hope of realizing a profit, but he believes "the system and the idea is something that can benefit the U.S. and the world."

For decades, scientists have warned of the approaching depletion of the world's fossil fuels and the urgent need to develop alternate sources of energy. Last year's "energy crisis" may have been a blessing in disguise because it warned of what could happen if energy sources ran out or were cut off.

As a result, McCoy believes serious attention is being given to the development of alternate power producing systems and ideas once considered too impractical to use.

Among the bundle of reports, designs and studies he has acquired over the years, McCoy has a card on which is typed something he found in a "dictionary of ideas" he keeps in his workshop. It reads:

"The Chinese write the word 'crisis' with two characters. One means 'danger' and the other means 'opportunity'. Together they spell 'crisis'."

Child Welfare board learns of adoptions

Six children from Williamson County have been placed for adoption in the past six months according to a report presented last week to the county Child Welfare Board.

The children had been in the custody of the Texas Department of Public Welfare and were living in foster homes, the report said.

While the children were in foster homes some of their expenses were paid by county funds.

Since the board's first anniversary was in May, the monthly meeting was a luncheon at Southwestern University Commons. County officials including the county judge and commissioners were invited to attend. However, the only county officials attending were Viola Honeycutt, treasurer and Ben Kurio, auditor.

Ron Massey was introduced as the new supervisor of the Child Protective Services of the DPW for a four county area including Williamson.

A new caseworker for Williamson County, John Monarchi, was also introduced at the meeting.

The board presented recommendations to County Judge C. L. Chance for new appointments.

Those recommended for reappointment were Jerry Goree (presently president of the board), Irene Arning, Rita Norman and Charles Wright.

DOOR OPENERS

Keys and churches are door openers. In both cases, each require you to put forth some effort. The key you must insert in the lock and turn. Our Lord made the way to heaven even easier, for all that you have to do is present yourself and believe.

"For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: Not of works lest any man should boast: For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them."

Wet weather causes blight to area crops

Cotton and grain sorghum are a bit under the weather as a result of the last month's rains, County Agent John Wakefield said Friday.

"There for a while, everybody was praying for rain 'cause of the spring's dryness," he said. "Now we've had too much."

"Cotton is having a terrific struggle with the wet weather," he said. Two or three plants near Hutto have turned brown with wet weather blight.

Wakefield said some grain sorghum in low-lying areas are turning extremely yellow from the moisture.

"We just need a spell of warm, dry weather to chase it away," he said.

52 accidents in county during April

The Texas Highway Patrol investigated 52 accidents on rural highways in Williamson County during the month of April, according to Sergeant Fred Hurst, Highway Patrol Supervisor of this area.

These 52 accidents have resulted in 1 death and 24 injuries for the month of April, 1975.

These figures result in a total of 186 accidents with 3 deaths and 104 injured in Williamson County during 1975.

SCOUTS AT TRAINING

Boy Scout troop leaders are attending a training weekend at Lost Pines Wilderness Camp.

Attending are patrol leaders Randall Williams, David Morse, Bill Buckner and Craig Price; also troop staff James Carter, Scott Smith and Bruce Allamon.

JONAH NEWS

BY MRS. MARY BARRINGTON

Sunshine really looks good after the fine rains we have had.

We have so much to be thankful for. We didn't have enough hail to hurt anything much. Everything is growing and looking so pretty. The weeds and grass are also thriving.

Mr. and Mrs. Clint Ransom went to Brownwood last Friday and returned home Sunday. They visited Mr. Clarence Ransom and his daughter, Debbie, and family.

Mrs. Harley Davis in on the sick list; she is improving.

We had some high wind and rain Tuesday night; also a little hail. We had .8 of an inch of rain.

Mr. and Mrs. Ansel Holmstrom attended graduation exercises at Texas A&M University at College Station Saturday; their daughter, Carlette, graduated. She returned home until June and will go to work then.

We really enjoy Sartor's Store in Jonah again. Mr. and Mrs. Gibson have been very busy working on their home and the store.

Mr. and Mrs. Barney Satterfield of San Antonio came to see Mrs. Nettie Satterfield, Sunday afternoon, and had supper with her.

Mr. and Mrs. Claud Gattis and little grandson, Bret Gattis, spent Tuesday with Miss Olea and Frances Gattis.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Hood of San Antonio, Mrs. Stella Marshall and Mrs. Nora Husefluke, of Weir, and Mrs. Nettie Satterfield of Jonah all went to Fort Worth recently to visit their brother, Zack Barrington, and Mr. and Mrs. Marcos Moore.

A & M SCHOLARSHIPS — of $500 each have been awarded to James Grohman and Douglas Domel, Georgetown High School seniors. The scholarships are sponsored by the Williamson County A & M Mothers Club, financed by the club's annual turkey supper. Seventeen applicants from high schools of Williamson County were considered.

PTA has installation of officers

The Georgetown Parent-Teachers Association will meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the elementary school. Mrs. James Draeger will be installed as president.

"I hope anyone with ideas for next year's programs will attend this meeting and share them with us," said Mrs. Linda Collings, program chairman-elect.

Innerspace is one!

Travel counselors seeing Texas spots in 'rolling classroom'

A 'rolling classroom' stopped in Georgetown Monday afternoon and its students toured InnerSpace Cave.

"Oh, it is beautiful!" the hostesses of the Texas Highway Tourist Bureaus exclaimed. "Now we can tell the tourists, first hand, just what to see on I-35 between Georgetown and Austin."

That is the purpose of the Discover Texas Association familiarization tours.

In a period of three years, taking a group of different girls each time, the Discover Texas Association will make two trips a year — the six trips will cover Texas.

The hostesses will go back to their tourist bureaus in Amarillo, Anthony, Denison, Gainesville, Laredo, Orange, Texarkana, Waskom, Wichita Falls, Austin and Langtry and share with their co-workers what they saw so that they can better serve tourists who come to the pleasant bureaus on the entrance roads to Texas.

Three representatives of AAA were also a part of the group.

THEY LIKED INNERSPACE — the 'rolling classroom' of Texas Travel Counselors getting a closeup look at the popular tourist stops of Texas, shown as they left InnerSpace Caverns on the subway car, and were met by guides Ollie Ann Myers, Peggy Braun and InnerSpace Assistant Manager Don Flowers.

This 700 mile trip took the group from Arlington where they toured Six Flags Over Texas, to Waco where they toured Fort Fisher, the Texas Ranger Museum, and the large campgrounds behind Fort Fisher and were entertained at lunch in the new Waterworks Restaurant by the Brazos River (an adventure in itself, they said); then to InnerSpace at Georgetown and to spend the night in Austin before touring LBJ country, San Marcos, New Braunfels, Longhorn Cavern and Lakeway. After the Hill Country, they will circle back through the Glen Rose-Granbury area to Fort Worth.

They were travelling in style aboard the Big Mac Coach, luxury bus provided by the Texas McDonald Systems, Inc. This beautiful coach seats twenty persons and includes such unusual features as swivel armchairs, couches, color television, telephones, internal vacuum cleaner system, AM-FM stereo, tape system, indirect lighting, kitchen and bathroom facilities — all the comforts of home.

The next trip will be through the Gulf Coast - Rio Grande Valley region, just prior to the annual influx of winter visitors from the northern states and Canada.

Talking to the SUN representative in Donald Duncan's office at InnerSpace, Jim Battersby, president of Discover Texas Association, said Texas has three million travellers each year.

"The tourist business is a really big business. There are 600,000 persons working in it and last year $4,800,000,000 (that's four billion, eight hundred million!) was spent on tourism."

"We are making possible this learning experience which could not be financed with tax dollars. DTA members and various hosts along the route are paying all the costs. We can't think of a better example of business and government working together to improve a very vital segment of the state's economy," Battersby added.

Film series continues at Southwestern and Public Library

Showings of a film series, "Pioneers of Modern Painting," is continuing here through the next four weeks.

This week's presentation will be on Claude Monet. It will be shown Tuesday at 9 p. m. in the courtyard of Herman Brown-Moody Shearn Hall at Southwestern University at Georgetown on Tuesday evening and again Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. in the Georgetown City Library.

The series, on loan from the National Gallery of Art, covers the life and work of six leading artists of the late 19th and early 20th centuries, including Edouard Manet and Paul Cezanne (already shown), Monet, Georges Seurat, Henri Rousseau, and Edvard Munch. A 45-minute color film has been devoted to each of the six artists whom Kenneth Clark considers to be "the pioneers of what we still call modern painting."

Most of the series was filmed in France, with the exception of the works of Munch which was photographed in Norway.

The series has been brought to Georgetown through the efforts of the offices of the President and the Dean of Students at Southwestern and of the Georgetown City Library.

NEW DIRECTORS—for the Georgetown United Way (formerly the United Fund) are David True, Debbie Riddle, and Frank Hubbard. All were elected for three year terms at the Wednesday meeting.

Family Planning clinic to expand schedule

The Williamson-Burnet County Family Planning Mobile unit will be in Georgetown beginning at 9 a. m. May 22.

The clinic is located at St. Paul's Methodist Church at 7th and Timber Streets.

An additional clinic will be added each month since the doctor was unable to see all the patients who have been coming on the regular days. Regular clinic days are second and fourth Wednesdays of each month.

Services of the clinic include a complete physical, Pap test, venereal disease testing and treatment, counseling on different types of contraceptives, counseling on sterilization, and counseling for problem pregnancies.

Local gardeners to show daylilies

Flower growers from Georgetown are invited to attend the 15th annual daylily show sponsored by the Austin Hemerocallis Society in the Austin Area Garden Center from 2 to 5 p. m. Saturday, May 24. Admission to the show and to the daylily planting in the garden is free.

The hemerocallis show will include exhibitors Mrs. Thomas E. and Miss Katie Stone of Georgetown. Daylilies and some companion plants will be available for purchase at the show.

The horticulture division of the show will be staged and judged under rules of the American Hemerocallis Society. The artistic arrangements division will be on the theme "The Flowering of our Heritage" and will include such classes as "Colonial Charm" featuring yellow or gold daylilies, "Bounty from the Indians" with arrangements of red lilies, and "Paul Revere's Ride" using design expressing motion. Miniature designs will be placed in the class called "Yankee Doodle Dandy."

Name changed to 'United Way'

The Georgetown United Fund is now officially called the Georgetown United Way. Directors, meeting Wednesday, changed the name to comply with the national charity.

Finding the present constitution difficult to work under, the board added a trial proposal, which states:

Administration of the Georgetown United Fund shall be by a board of directors elected to 3, 2, and 1 year terms.

Ex-officio members shall be representatives of the institutional agencies that choose to be active in the United Fund organization.

Directors, officers, and head(s) of drive campaign will be elected in January.

Nominations of directors, officers, and head(s) of drive will be made by a nominating committee named by the current president at the end of the preceding year.

Officers and head of drive campaign shall be elected from the directors or from the community at large.

Institutional agencies shall be notified and invited to select a representative and notify the president of their decision.

The Admissions and Budget committee shall be appointed by the president after the election of directors, officers, and head(s) of drive. It is suggested that the head of drive be on this committee.

The budget committee will report its recommendations at the next meeting.

Head start celebrates 10th birthday

Mary Bailey Child Development Center joins with all the nation's Head Start Projects in celebration of the tenth birthday for Head Start. Mary Bailey celebrated the birthday, Tuesday, with a reading of a proclamation by Mayor Joe Crawford stating Georgetown's involvement in Head Start, a presentation of the history of Mary Bailey as a Head Start center given by Ms. Madella Hilliard and Rosetta Rose, followed by a birthday celebration by parents of Head Start children and friends.

Mary Bailey has been a Head Start project since the summer of 1967. At that time the project was located on Timber Street and was under the direction of Mrs. Maybell Clark. Thirty-five children were first served during this summer program. The Head Start program contained the five major components from the beginning which include: health, nutrition, education, parent involvement, and social services programs.

In the Spring of 1972 Mary Bailey relocated to the American Legion building on the corner of Eighth and Ash Streets. At that time the program was under the direction of Mrs. Juanita Glover, and it served forty children during the long term and twenty during the summer.

In September, 1975, the enrollment was increased to 55 children.

Presently the staff includes Frances Sires, director; Rosetta Rose, head teacher; Tina Rosales and Margie Medrano, teachers; Frankie Dickerson, Joyce Perry, and Madella Hilliard, associate teachers, and Ramona Nararrette, cook.

Also working with the children are CETA on-the-job trainees Ms. Lupe Dominguez and Helen Langdon.

As the school year moves into the summer, the enrollment will again be cut to serving twenty children because the funds allocated to the Head Start program require a reduction of staff during the summer months.

Expenses told at city hall

Last month's City Council elections did little to pump money into Georgetown's economy as only $194.30 was spent by all candidates combined.

Expenses and contributions reported at city hall include Debbie Riddle, $45 in contributions and $99.30 spent; John Doerfler, $25 in contributions and $25 spent; Harry Gold, no contributions and $12 spent; Hubert Brock, no contributions and $12 spent; and Garry Hinesley, $10 in contributions and $46 spent.

William C. Shell and L. C. Jones both reported no contributions and no expenses. Gold, Shell and Doerfler won.

Bullock pays city sales taxes

Comptroller Bob Bullock has mailed a check for $12,881.82 as Georgetown's share of $19.9 million of monthly city sales tax payments in Texas.

Other Williamson County cities receiving May payments are Bartlett, $1,742.82; Granger, $1,727.67; Round Rock, $4,198.17; and Taylor, $17,833.53.

Williamson County cities with payments of less than $500 due will receive a quarterly payment in June.

Candidates file reports

Only two of the five Georgetown School Board candidates had filed 31 day post-election financial statements Thursday.

The completed campaign contribution and expenditure statement is required by Texas Election Code. The form requires candidates to list "all expenditures or the creation of debt or obligations to any person aggregating more than $10 in the 38 day reporting period."

Contributions and loans of money in the amount of $10 or more must be reported and the full name and address of any creditor or contributor given.

Victorious candidate Clare Mashburn reported a total of $244 contributions to pay her $244 campaign expenditures. She paid a total of $203 for radio and newspaper advertising. Other expenditures were for posters and postage.

Contributors to Mrs. Mashburn's campaign were Dr. and Mrs. H. R. Gaddy — $100, C. J. Kreger — $25, Lewis Holder — $25, Mearl Leffler — $20, Mrs. Carl Burnette — $10, Dona and Jim Byers — $10 and Mr. and Mrs. Bob Plunkett — $5.

DON HEWLETT, the other winning candidate, had not filed the post election report Thursday, according to school Board Secretary James Draeger.

HAROLD PARKER, who was the incumbent in the election and lost to Hewlett by only eight votes, listed $87.04 in expenditures. Under campaign contributions he listed none.

Other candidates Dr. Nick Sikes and Walter Doerfler, Jr. had not turned in final statements Thursday. However, those candidates' statements turned in seven days before the election, stated no contributions and no expenditures.

Learn to swim this summer at city pool

"Learn to Swim" is the summer program of the Georgetown City Recreation Department, announced director Jim Mallon.

The program will consist of three two-week sessions with the first beginning on June 9.

Registration is on Friday June 6 at 9:30 a. m. at the city pool. Pupils will be assigned to age groups according to swimming ability.

Classes will meet daily, Monday through Friday, and there will be a charge of 35¢ per day.

For more information about the swimming classes, call Jim Mallon at 863-6511, ext. 371, or 863-5217.

Other city summer recreation plans will be announced later, Mallon said.

Agency board approves nutrition program

Plans were approved Monday night by the Williamson-Burnet County Opportunities, Inc., board of directors for a community food and nutrition program.

Application for the program requests $60,523 from the federal Community Services Administration (formerly the Office of Economic Opportunity).

Eighteen thousand dollars will be budgeted for emergency food vouchers for families.

The rest of the money, according to Community Action Agency Assistant Director Florene Ebeling, will be used to hire four staff persons to develop a garden program, a canning program (where canning equipment and instructions are provided) and a food co-op program.

Mrs. Ebeling estimated that 250 families could be closely involved in the program within the two counties.

"The program will provide garden spots for the clients and staff members will actually garden with them to help best utilize the land," explained Mrs. Ebeling when questioned about how this program would differ from the nutrition program in the county's home demonstration office.

"This nutrition program will be directed to the target area or low income family," Mrs. Ebeling said.

IN OTHER BUSINESS, the board seated Williamson County Commissioner Wesley Johnson, to replace Rosamond McClain as the county's representative to the board. Mrs. McClain resigned her position.

MRS. EBELING ANNOUNCED a possible cost of living increase in funds to the Head Start program, an educational and nutrition program for preschool age children.

A bill has been introduced in Congress that would increase the funds by $23,000, she explained. "These funds are not for program expansion, but merely to help the existing Head Start centers cope with increases in the cost of living."

THE BOARD ALSO updated personnel policies of the agency. In regards to employees who become pregnant, maternity leave will be granted in the amount of time recommended by her physician.

Previously, a pregnant employee was granted a maximum of six months maternity leave. Under the revised policy, the woman's position will be retained for her, although a temporary employee may be hired for her position while she is on leave.

Each year the Office of Economic Opportunity goes over personnel policies of agencies and recommends changes to comply with the agencies' goals, according to Mrs. Ebeling.

Southwestern University placed on National Register of Historic Places

Southwestern University at Georgetown, the state's oldest chartered university, has had two of its buildings placed on the National Register of Historic Places, according to Joe R. Williams, director of the National Register Programs for Texas, Texas Historical Commission.

Williams said that the Texas Historic Commission had nominated the Southwestern University Administration Building and Mood Hall for inclusion for the register, and that those two buildings were placed on that register on April 23. There are less than 300 historic Texas sites that have qualified for inclusion on the National Register, Williams said.

By being on the National Register, the buildings are "now afforded the privilege granted under the Historic Preservation Act of 1966," Williams says.

This makes the two Southwestern buildings eligible for matching federal funds for preservation or renovation while at the same time protecting the buildings from alteration or demolition through the use of federal funds.

It also means that Mood Hall and the Administration Building will be listed in the National Register which is periodically published. Lists of such sites are expected to be popular among tourists during the Bicentennial.

Williams said that the Texas Historical Commission is planning a special plaque for Texas sites listed on the register which have already been marked with Texas Historic Medallions. The Administration Building has one of the Texas markers.

Dr. Durwood Fleming, president of Southwestern University, responded to Williams announcement by noting "that we now have the funds for the remodeling and refurbishing of these two architectural treasures. The work will be done on the inside of the buildings as sensitively and carefully as can be done to protect design and motif. The outside of the buildings will not be altered."

Refurbishing the historic Administration Building will be done through a $1-million grant from the Cullen Foundation of Houston. The stately, turreted rock structure is the oldest on the campus. Designed in a Neo-Romanesque style during the administration of Regent (President) Dr. J. H. McLean, the building was constructed during the years 1898-1900 under the leadership of Regent Robert Stewart Hyer. Builders were Flume and Waterston of Great Britain, who had worked on the Texas Capitol.

When first completed the building housed virtually the entire campus — chapel, classrooms, library, and offices. Since that time 29 other buildings have been added to the 600 acre campus. The 30th building, the Richardson Physical Education Center, is presently under construction.

The Cullen Foundation gift joins many other gifts that have helped construct the building and to keep it functional, including a gift of land from the plantation of the late President of the Republic of Texas, General Sam Houston.

Plans are also being made to refurbish historic Mood Hall with a $500,000 gift from The Bridwell Foundation. The three-story stone structure, featuring an inner court as a part of its Richardsonian architecture, was completed in 1908 at a cost of $58,000. Used for many years as a men's dormitory and presently for faculty offices — the renovation is expected to make the building into a more functional office-academic facility.

The building was named for Dr. Francis Asbury Mood, founder and first regent of Southwestern University. When renovation is completed, the building will be renamed Mood-Bridwell Hall.

Original architect of Mood Hall was C. H. Page of Austin, the uncle of two members of the firm of Page-Southerland-Page of Austin which is planning the renovation of both Mood Hall and the Administration Building.
